Are you a millennial looking for a fresh and exciting way to engage with cultural heritage? The call is open to take part in the project “COOLTOUR – Millennials for Cultural Heritage” a new initiative that connects young people with heritage sites and professionals while encouraging dialogue and interaction between them.

THE CALL FOR PARTICIPANTS

The call will select 30 Millennials (18-24 years old) from each of the Countries involved (Italy, Croatia, Serbia, Slovenia, Cyprus, and Hungary), that will participate in a European, innovative project aimed at nurturing the dialogue between the Millennials and the managers of the heritage sites in their Countries.

During the project, participants will be involved in pilots, workshops, and study visits, but they will also experiment with innovative ways of debate and knowledge sharing, and get to beta test the new COOLTOUR App, created to showcase the potential of heritage sites.

Amongst the 30 Millennials selected in each Country, 10 will participate in international mobility that will be held at Viminacium Archaeological park (RS) together with other selected youngsters coming from all the other Countries; The participants will have a unique opportunity to travel, visit, exchange, study together, experience co-creation processes with heritage managers on an actual heritage site and have the power to impact the way heritage sites present themselves and communicate with Millennials!
